

Amphibian Ecology & Road Rescue Training

Salamanders and frogs migrate by the thousands from forests to wetlands each spring, often crossing our roads at great peril. These seldom-seen amphibians radiate charisma, inspiration, and moxie on even the rainiest April nights. But they need our help!

Join North Branch Nature Center biologists for an evening program featuring local amphibian ecology. Then learn how you, your family, or your students can participate in the Amphibian Road Crossing citizen science project this spring. This project recruits local community members to rescue thousands of amphibians while collecting important migration data used by town planners and ecologists. Join our team of amphibian “crossing guards” this spring!
